

AMELIA MOORE TUCKER

House of Representatives 1961-1963

Amelia Moore Tucker became the first African American woman elected to the General Assembly. While serving, Tucker pressed for a public accommodations act. It failed to pass, but Tucker did see the passage of an enabling act authorizing cities to pass their own civil rights measures. Tucker served on President Richard Nixon's advisory board on ethnic groups in the 1970s.

